Course Description

Many drugs have mind-altering effects, but some are defined as legal and some as illegal. The War on Drugs have been launched in many societies but none of them has successfully become a drug-free society. This course provides students an understanding of drug-related issues from a perspective of medical anthropology. Through close readings of ethnographies, viewing of videos, and fieldtrips, the class explores drug use, prevention, and treatment in both scientific and cultural perspectives and re-examines the linkages between legal and illegal behaviors, healthy and unhealthy bodily conditions, as well as science and culture.

What you will learn:

Student taking this course will:

- acquire basic knowledge in medical anthropology;
- learn the skills to comprehend the drug history in Hong Kong, China, and other parts of the world;
- develop the ability to apply the learned knowledge to analyze the complex relationship between science and culture; and
- acquire a critical mind to evaluate any social issues.

Course Requirements:

Response Papers:	50% (25% x 2)
Final Exam:	50%

1) Response Papers (50%)

Choose two weekly topics and write two 3-4 page response papers. Response papers should discuss the topic with reference to the assigned reading and/or lecture. Instead of merely summarizing the readings/lecture, you should raise critical points of views, for example, what new insights you have got, what limitations you have identified, what follow-up questions have come to your mind, etc. Ideally, a central theme should be raised to link up your arguments.

In this course, fieldtrip will be arranged. You can choose to write a 3-4 page ethnographic paper to substitute one response paper. The ethnographic paper should include your field observations and discussion with reference to the assigned readings. Similar to the response paper, instead of merely describing your field observations or summarizing the readings, you should raise critical points of views.

Submit your first response paper on or before 4 April and second response paper on or before 25 April.

2) Final Exam (50%):

Four open-ended questions will be given on 26 April and choose two to answer. Write each answer of 2-3 pages. This is a take-home exam, and the questions cover all the topics in the lecture. You will have one week's time to complete the exam.

After finishing your written assignments, please submit soft copies to both VeriGuide and the course website (Blackboard). Hard copies are not required. When you name your files, please indicate the topics that you are responding to.

The paper should be written in the following format: Double line spacing, Times New Roman, and font 12 (either Chinese or English).

Please submit your assignment on time. Marks will be deducted (i.e. one point per day) for late submission.
